"The Joe Bev Holiday Treat" (59:22)

 Amusing, Engaging, Unusual

Magazine-style format that works well for commercial radio with an interesting mix of short shows and "familiar" characters blended together by the host. Good examples of strong dialog to create visuals by the listener. The Sherlock Holmes piece is very entertaining with good acting, tight sound effects and writing...not your typical Sherlock Holmes story! From a broadcaster's perspective, the show immediately engages the listener by jumping right into the story--no long drawn-out intros. The outro/intro between segments is equally short. I heard no objectionable language. There was a light reference to track marks, in the true Holmes story style. This would play well to a broad audience of all ages.

"The Christmas I Saved Macy's" (04:18)

 Amusing, Humorous, Sweet

Joe: I thoroughly enjoyed your story. I was taken back to the memories of shopping in the big department stores of my childhood and the smoke filled lounges where weary Moms took refuge from the crowds. The pacing is just right, the FX subtle and the music in tune with the story. I loved the hint of things to come when you described "your Buster Browns lifting off the sidewalk". Thank you for the refuge from work and returning me to memories that need cuddling lest we forget life's opportunities to be a hero! Stations, this is nice piece of writing and enjoyment for your listeners.

 Amusing, Humorous, Light-hearted

An unusual little piece that celebrates the memories of childhood in the context of the holiday season. Joe's writing is clever. His delivery is earnest and poignant. I enjoyed the sound effects and music as a nice way of dramatizing the story. This could be used in a locally-produced magazine show, focusing on the topic of children and the holidays.

 Humorous, Offbeat, Upbeat

This is a wonderful seasonal essay that features a nice bit of storytelling. It's a strange childhood memory brought to life with a lot of heart and humor. Love the use of music. I'm very glad I found this.
